

From: Casey Research <subscribers@caseyresearch.com>
Subject: Read this before gold hits $2,000
Date: August 25, 2011 11:28:50 PM EDT
To: dougzen@en.com
Reply-To: subscribers@caseyresearch.com

Dear Casey Subscriber,

$1700... $1800... $1900... seems like there's no stopping gold.

And while no bull market moves up in a straight line, gold's inevitable price dips represent bargains for smart investors.

But the real bargains can be found in the companies that mine gold. Oddly, they're severely lagging the price of the yellow metal, even though they historically outgain it by a margin of 3 to 1.

This has created an outstanding profit opportunity that's unlikely to last very long.

Jeff Clark, our senior precious metals analyst, has just put together an investor bulletin that shows you how to take advantage of the current divergence between gold mining companies and gold itself.

We urge you to read it now.

Best regards,

The Casey Research Precious Metals Team

How Big Investment Funds
Are Buying
Gold for $911.62/oz

(Even though it's selling for nearly twice that...)

Read it now

Get BIG GOLD and save $50 off the regular price

© 2011 Casey Research.

No longer wish to receive special offers from us? Click here for options.